- The diagram illustrates the traditional Chinese correlation between the twelve zodiac animals and the twelve months of the year. The animals are arranged in a circle: Rat, Ox, Tiger, Rabbit, Dragon, Snake, Horse, Goat, Monkey, Rooster, Dog, and Pig. Below them, the months are arranged in a circle: January, February, March, April, May, June, July, August, September, October, November, and December. Arrows point from each animal to its corresponding month, showing that the Rat corresponds to January, the Ox to February, and so on through the year.

A horizontal row of 15 vertical black bars of varying widths. The bars are arranged in a sequence that starts with short bars, followed by a longer bar, then a group of three short bars, a group of four short bars, a group of three short bars, and finally a question mark at the end.
